Dear Mr.

Private / personal letter

This year

Much in common

Both nations want peace (leaders the same)

Differences exist

No one else can speak for Israel - democracy

Home rule basis

Public statements / debates counterproductive

US strong ties to both

Willing to mediate

Presidential involvement - Camp David or other

Need for secrecy (absolute)

Both add positive influence for one more mty

Respond directly through Vance

This is a private and personal letter, and I would appreciate your honoring its confidentiality for the time being. I want to express myself frankly and directly to you.

During the past year under your leadership of Israel we have made remarkable progress toward peace. The boldness and <sup>strong</sup> leadership qualities exhibited by you and President Sadat have contributed to a new relationship which was not anticipated by the rest of the world. In my opinion you are the only Israeli leader who, in the foreseeable future, can continue this progress. You have a strong hold on the government, loyalty among your associates, and the confidence of the people of your country.

MEETING ON FOREIGN ASSISTANCE WITH RELIGIOUS LEADERS

Monday, July 31, 1978
2:00 p.m. (15 minutes)
Cabinet Room

From: Zbigniew Brzezinski Zb
Anne Wexler
Michael H. Chanin MAC

I. PURPOSE:

To discuss foreign assistance appropriations with approximately 25 American religious leaders.

II. BACKGROUND, PARTICIPANTS AND PRESS PLANS:

- A. Background: These religious leaders are coming to the White House at your invitation. They were chosen by Anne Wexler's office and National Security Council staff after consultation with key religious supporters.

When you arrive, the meeting will have been going for 45 minutes. Zbigniew Brzezinski, Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs, gave an overview of how foreign assistance fits into our overall foreign policy. Warren Christopher, Deputy Secretary of State, pointed to the importance of aid in supporting our human rights policy. Governor John Gilligan, Administrator, AID, discussed legislation. Fred Bergsten, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for International Affairs, discussed the importance of U. S. participation in International Development Banks.

- B. Purpose: The purpose of the meeting is to obtain the help of the key religious leaders on foreign assistance.
- C. Participants: A number of the participants are already working in support. The religious leaders attending the meeting are listed on Attachment B.

In addition, the following persons will be present from the Administration:

State: Warren Christopher

Treasury: Fred Bergsten

AID: Governor John Gilligan

WH/NSC Staff: Zbigniew Brzezinski, Henry Owen,
Mike Chanin, Bob Beckel, Madeleine
Albright, Guy Erb, Phil Spector,
Vicki Mongiardo

III. TALKING POINTS

Talking points prepared by the National Security Council are contained in Attachment A.

TALKING POINTS

1. I am very glad that you could join us today. I know that you share my concern for the future of the United States and the developing countries, the importance of our relationship with them to our nation and to the American people.

2. I have spoken on many occasions to leaders of developing countries. On many issues their views are different from ours. But one goal that we share is that of helping their peoples develop and increase their abilities to meet their needs for jobs, food, health, and shelter. Our collaboration with developing countries in this task is one of our major responsibilities as a world leader and as a nation blessed with great riches.

3. To further increase our ability to assist other nations, I have asked Governor Gilligan to lead an effort to enhance the effectiveness of U.S. assistance programs. He will act as the Administration's principal spokesman on foreign assistance issues and as the Chairman of the Development Coordination Committee, whose coordination of the work of all government agencies interested in aid will greatly help our aid efforts.

4. Developing countries need resources and technology to fulfill their objectives for their long-run development. I have therefore announced the creation of a Foundation for International Technological Collaboration. It will become a focal point for our support of research, development, and experimentation in developing countries.

5. I have directed that our aid be concentrated on those that need it most, and on the poorest countries. But we need the support of the American people and Congress if we are to play our full part. I am frequently made aware of the fact that our country is not doing enough. We are, for example, the only nation in the world that is in arrears in its contributions to the multilateral development banks. During my recent meeting in Bonn, all of the other leaders stressed the importance of increased assistance to the developing countries. With them I have pledged my support for greater development cooperation with developing nations.

6. The assistance programs that I proposed this year to Congress which would support our own activities and those of the International Development Banks and the United Nations are designed to make a significant contribution to world development.

7. But as you well know, the Congress does not always share my view that our foreign aid programs are essential to the well-being of hundreds of millions of people and to our own nation's capacity to meet the challenge of a changing world. Unfortunately, it is all too popular to practice fiscal responsibility by cutting foreign aid. This year, I requested a total program of some $8.3 billion, only to see it cut by over $1 billion by the House Appropriations Committee. That amounts to a 13 percent cut (25 percent for the international banks). This is more than fiscal responsibility. Some in the Congress also propose restrictions similar to those that already restrict the effectiveness of our aid and that can adversely effect our participation in multilateral institutions.

8. Our attention is now focused on the House and its vote on Wednesday. But we must also look ahead to the consideration by the Senate of the aid bill in coming weeks. Your own efforts and those of other American religious leaders in support of U. S. foreign assistance have been very significant, particularly since so many of you have supported private overseas activities that complement so well what our government can do. You have also been active in the debate on America's role in the world. Only through public debate, of the sort that you have encouraged, can our people come to understand the links between our society and poor countries. I encourage you to continue both these tasks. I need your help, and that of those who look to you for leadership, to get adequate foreign assistance appropriations through the Congress.

ACTION

MEMORANDUM FOR:

THE PRESIDENT

FROM:

THE VICE PRESIDENT
ZBIGNIEW BRZEZINSKI

SUBJECT:

Hubert H. Humphrey North-South
Scholarships

In Caracas in March, you announced your intention to establish a program of scholarships in memory of Senator Humphrey to bring students from the developing world to study in U.S. colleges. On your return, you asked that we set up an inter-agency group to work with Mrs. Humphrey and formulate a proposal for your decision. Representatives from the Domestic Council, NSC, State Department, ICA, and OMB worked on the issue, and fully support the recommended proposal which is at Tab A. It is the product of many inter-agency meetings where many other proposals were suggested and discarded. Originally, we considered a scholarship program for poor undergraduates, but we rejected it because it was: (a) much too expensive (about $30 million per year); (b) impractical -- it would be difficult to select genuinely poor but qualified students from the third world; and (c) disorienting -- in their most formative years, LDC students could not avoid becoming "Americanized", and many would seek careers in the U.S.

We settled on the proposal for a single-year, early career program because it is inexpensive (about $5 million per year); it would provide an education for those who otherwise wouldn't have the opportunity; and it is most likely to contribute to the career of a new generation of leaders.

OMB has reviewed the budget figures, supports the proposal, and has already included it in the current planning figures for FY 1980. ICA has informed us that the program can be established by a memo from you to ICA, instructing them to implement the program under the authority of the Fulbright Act.

RECOMMENDATION:

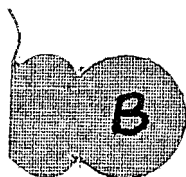

We have attached such a memo at Tab B, and recommend that you sign it. We have already consulted with Mrs. Humphrey, who supports the proposal, and we will brief the Congressional leadership before your announcement.

Approve ✓ Disapprove       

Congressional Liaison concurs.

HUBERT H. HUMPHREY NORTH-SOUTH SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

- I. Proposal: To establish a Hubert H. Humphrey North-South Scholarship Program for outstanding youth of modest means from all of the developing countries to study for one year of specialized training in the U.S. The scholarships would be offered to men and women engaged in public service to study in fields directly related to their work, including health, social work, rural or urban development.
- II. Purpose: The Program's purpose is to help educate a core group of a new generation of developing world leaders. Like the Rhodes Scholarships, the "Humphrey Scholarships" could provide an education and a common experience for a group of future leaders, and by so doing, provide a compelling symbol of U.S. interest in the developing world. Moreover, by the competitiveness involved in obtaining such a scholarship, student applicants will demonstrate to an American public disinterested in the third world that the LDC's still are very interested in the U.S.

Those scholarships could not, of course, contribute very significantly to narrowing the educational gap between the industrialized and the developing countries, and the last thing we would want to do is sell the program in that way. But it could show in a very visible way that we are intent on contributing to the narrowing of that gap, and it possibly could have a "demonstration effect", setting an example which other U.S. institutions might emulate.

By seeking out the talented youth who might otherwise not be able to afford an education, the program would be demonstrating a special American concern for helping the poor and for promoting equality of opportunity. The purpose of the studies would be to enhance the students' capabilities for public service, in particular to help improve incomes, living standards and employment of poor people and enable them to contribute more effectively to the equitable development of their country.
- III. Number of Participants: The scholarships would be made available to men and women -- in roughly equal proportion overall -- from all developing countries with which we have diplomatic relations on a scale weighted by population (3 for countries over 10 million, 2 for those between 1 and 10 million, and 1 for countries with a population of less than 1 million, for a total of 241 students).

- IV. Selection Criteria: Under the terms of the program, outstanding young professionals, age 25-33, working in disciplines related to the public service for at least two and no more than five years, and unable to afford further education, would be selected for a one-year course in the United States, which may lead to a degree, but doesn't have to. The following additional criteria would be used in selecting the candidates: they should be identifiable as potential future leaders; their education in the United States should be directly related to their future career development; they must be assured re-employment in their chosen career on return to their home country; they should be of a relatively modest family background, by participating country standards, and essentially dependent on his own salary for meeting living costs; they should have completed the equivalent of undergraduate university training (or post-secondary school institute). The selection would be made by the same administrative mechanism, augmented where necessary, as the Fulbright program. English language preparatory study would be offered where necessary.

The course, at a selected American institution of higher learning, would be followed by a 3-month summer workshop which would stress North-South development problems, but would also be designed to increase the participants' understanding of the U.S. At least a part of the summer workshop would take place at The Hubert H. Humphrey Institute for Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota.

- V. Administration: Placement and supervision of the students in the United States would be handled by a suitable contract agency, probably the Institute of International Education. Five years after the program begins, an evaluation of the program should be undertaken to make sure the program produces some measurable improvement in the careers of the scholars and that the program receives the appropriate recognition for this improvement.
- VI. Budget and Authorization: The annual cost of the program without allowance for inflation, would be $5 million.

Congressional authorization for such a program exists in the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961, as amended. The necessary appropriations require Congressional action.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

Subject: Telephone conversation with Senator John Glenn in response to his letter of July 21

For your information, the following points were made with Senator John Glenn during our telephone conversation regarding his reference to not being able to reach me.

- . On June 31, 1978 - I tried to speak with Senator John Glenn from North Carolina. Glenn's office indicated that he could not be reached.
- . On July 11, at 10:15 a.m., Assistant Secretary Manatos called Senator Glenn on my behalf to arrange a meeting. Glenn's office did not return the calls.
- . On July 18, I rearranged my schedule, setting aside 3:00 - 3:30 p.m. for a meeting with Senator Glenn to discuss this issue. Seven calls were placed to his office to confirm his availability for the meeting. No calls were returned.

Dear Mr. Chairman:

Thank you for your letter of July 21, which you sent to the President regarding the establishment of the Census Advisory Committee. I am glad that we were able to discuss by telephone today the matters you raised in your letter to the President of July 21. I regret that staff misunderstandings between my office and your office have prevented effective communication on this issue. Working together we can prevent that in the future.

In response to the specific issues you have raised, let me make the following points. Consistent with the directive of President Carter to reduce the number of advisory committees within the Federal Government, 22 of the 88 advisory committees that existed within the Department of Commerce when I took office have been terminated. I should point out, however, that during my year and a half in office, the number of total advisory committees in the Department has increased due to the creation of 24 new Departmental advisory committees enacted by Congress.

The Census Advisory Committee is being established for the following reasons. The Congress expressed concern about the Bureau's procedures and operations and about the Bureau's ability to evaluate itself. They believe that an advisory committee, designed to advise the Secretary, could serve as a valuable mechanism to address their concerns. This communication came from the Chairman and Members of the House Subcommittee on Census and Population which approved legislation to reform the Bureau of the Census.

The need for an advisory committee was again articulated by the Members of our House Appropriations Subcommittee who cut the Census budget by $25 million. They have indicated that establishment of the Census Advisory Committee would be considered a major step toward dealing with their concerns.

Likewise, the business community, the minority community, farmers, and city and county officials have also suggested that the census process might benefit by an assessment from outside the Bureau. It is my hope that the report of an independent Census Advisory Committee will put to rest the criticism.

In response to your concern that the functions of the Advisory Committee of the American Statistical Association (ASA) will be duplicative of the Census Advisory Committee, our review indicates the following differences between the two Committees. First, the ASA Committee appoints persons to committees to advise the Bureau of the Census, whereas the proposed Census Advisory Committee would advise the Secretary of Commerce. Second, the ASA Committee's review is primarily designed to assess the technical problems of the Census such as sampling, analysis, estimates and projections, whereas the Census Advisory Committee will review all procedures and operations of the Bureau of the Census. Third, the ASA Committee is staffed by the Bureau of the Census, whereas the newly established Census Advisory Committee will have full-time staff persons.

You also referred in your letter to a Panel on Decennial Census Plans which was organized by the National Committee on Statistics of the National Academy of Sciences. Following the submission of their final report in a few months on the Decennial Census, the Panel's contract will expire. The Advisory Committee's scope will go beyond the Decennial Census and the Committee will be an ongoing effort to examine a wider range of issues.

The Office of Statistical Policy and Standards is the Office which addresses statistical policy matters throughout the Federal Government. However, it does not review overall Census Bureau operations and procedures.

I believe that this information will give you a better understanding of the Department's actions on this issue.

In order to be sure that we have a full understanding of the matter, however, I shall look forward to meeting with you next week for further discussion.

Sincerely,

Juanita M. Kreps

Dear Mr. President:

This is to ask that you accept my resignation as your Special Assistant for Media and Public Affairs, effective October 1, 1978.

Though I will be concentrating on matters that do not require daily Presidential attention, I look forward to continuing our association and friendship.

I have admired your efforts to maintain a frank and candid relationship with the press and the American people. Your strong support for our national cultural life and your awareness of the importance of communications policy have been additional sources of personal and professional satisfaction.

Sincerely,

Mr. President -

Bill Quandt called about the draft letter you have to Sadat.

He says that Secretary Vance has no problem with it.

He also suggests that, if it is your desire to have it delivered to Sadat as quickly as possible, we dex back to him today the letter with your changes, or approval as is. The reason is that Ambassador Ells and Atherton are scheduled to see Sadat personally tomorrow (Sunday). Beyond that meeting, they don't know when the next time will be when they see him personally.

MEMORANDUM TO THE PRESIDENT

FROM: LONDON BUTLER
DATE: JULY 28, 1978
SUBJECT: ANTI-INFLATION STATEMENTS

Stu, Charlie, Ray Marshall and I met last night to discuss Mr. Meany's charges that Barry Bosworth has interfered in the collective bargaining process during recent wage negotiations.

We agreed that, in the future, an informal committee consisting of Ray, Charlie, Bob Strauss, Barry Bosworth and myself would meet to plan the Administration's position on major wage negotiations. We agreed further that any statement about wage negotiations by any of the members of this informal committee will reflect the positions agreed upon by the committee. Ray will chair the committee.

This, in effect, is the procedure that we have followed successfully during the postal negotiations.

If you approve of this approach, Ray will, on your behalf, tell Mr. Meany that you have taken this step in order to respond to his concerns. Ray will also underscore to Mr. Meany that Mr. Meany should work through Ray on important policy issues affecting the AFL-CIO.

Malls And Cities Square Off

NEW ORLEANS — The Shopping Mall Impresarios, the folks who brought us the wonders of safely enclosed, brightly decorated and meticulously planned shopping environments just off the freeways around every big city, are fast running out of large metropolitan area markets. So they are mounting a fresh onslaught on small city and rural America.

Flocks of developers are zeroing in on single small market areas, it was reported at a meeting of the Urban Land Institute in New Orleans. Said Hunter Hogan, board chairman of Norfolk's Goodman Segar Hogan Inc.: "Our firm is heavily involved in the shopping center business. I've never seen a stronger demand by retailers. We just got Morgantown, N.C. There were six national developers trying to get it."

The vast majority of new shopping centers and malls, however, is descending on open land outside and between towns. The danger: Main Street America may die in the process, deserted by its major stores, left with boarded storefronts.

Up to now, most small cities have supinely succumbed to the pressures of developers and the big chains — the Sears, J.C. Penney, Gimbels and similar retailers. They find it easier (and usually cheaper) to plunk a mall into the middle of a cornfield and surround it with asphalt than undergo the delicate negotiations necessary to insert major development into a downtown setting.

Now — belatedly, yet in increasing numbers — smaller cities are starting to fight back.

Pittsfield, Mass., just scored an apparent major victory by persuading the Pyramid companies of Syracuse, N.Y. — the very same developers who a year ago wanted to build a mall in a pasture in the nearby hamlet of Lenox — to come to downtown Pittsfield. In cooperation with Pittsfield's chamber of commerce, Pyramid will develop an 11-acre mall with 500,000 feet of shopping space, sure to be the major retail drawing point of western Massachusetts' Berkshires region.

The Pyramid developers, described as "tough, charming, pushy cowboys for development," have built 26 shopping centers, all suburban, many inflicting grave wounds on nearby downtowns. But they were thwarted in Lenox by Gov. Michael Dukakis, who responded to Pittsfield's call for help by threatening to deny access to the state highway for any suburban mall nearby.

Pittsfield's success is not yet assured. Federal and state aid will be necessary to build a 2,500 to 3,000-car parking garage at a cost of up to $15 million. And major department store chains — so far reluctant — must be persuaded to come into the project.

In Burlington, Vermont's prosperous and largest city, Pyramid is still playing Mr. Bad. The company is trying to build an 87-store enclosed mall, bigger than all of downtown Burlington, in a hay field in bucolic Williston, six miles out of town. Today Burlington is bustling with activity in shops in red Victorian buildings and has a small covered mall already in operation which only needs one or two major chain stores to become a solid success.

Yet if Pyramid builds its suburban mall, says Mayor Gordon Pacquette, the chains are sure to boycott downtown, city retail sales will plummet 40 percent and "we'll lose our whole downtown area."

Not every developer favors the regional malls. Says James Rouse, chairman of the Rouse Co., the nation's seventh largest shopping center developer: "No metropolitan area smaller than 300,000 people should have a regional shopping center. They create scattered sprawl and the tearing apart of older center cities."

The good news is that many small cities, still viable, are starting to learn from the bitter experience of others. Burlington's Mayor Paquette says he's heard from cities all around the country mobilizing for a fight for survival, much like his own. The Massachusetts experience shows how helpful a state government can be. And federal grants are now available for inner-city commercial development.

The time also may be ripe for some strong presidential jawboning with the big department store chains and developers. The president could and should inform them that when they spurn downtowns for marginally increased profits, they trigger decay for which government (i.e., the taxpayers) must later pay.

FROM: JIM FALLOWS, JON ALTER <sup>JA</sup>

SUBJECT: Talking Points for Reception Honoring
Gold Medal Winners in the Tchaikovsky
Competition, July 31, 1978.

1. It's truly a pleasure for me to welcome all of you here today, especially Nathaniel Rosen and Elmar Oliviera, who both won gold medals at the world famous Tchaikovsky competition earlier this month in Moscow. This is a magnificent achievement, not only for Nick and Elmar, who have received perhaps the highest tribute in the world of classical music, but also for the United States.

2. It has been twelve years now since we've won any gold medals at all at the Tchaikovsky competition and 20 years since an instrumentalist -- Van Cliburn -- took a first.

This year we won two gold medals and all Americans are very proud. We have many fine classical musicians in our Nation who bring enjoyment to millions, but these men deserve special recognition. I'm honored just to meet them.

3. Nick Rosen, a cellist, won with Dvorak's Cello Concerto and Tchaikovsky's Variations on a Rococo Theme. In 1966, at age 17, he played the same Tchaikovsky piece in Moscow before losing out in the finals. All I can say is it's a good thing you decided to go back. Pittsburgh, I know, is particularly proud of you. You've made a great contribution to the symphony there. Nick's wife Jennie also plays the cello, and his father David, who is a California judge, is an amateur violinist. He predicted his son's victory.

4. Elmar Oliviera's superb violin performance also dazzled the judges, who gave him a gold medal along with Ilya Grubert of the Soviet Union. He played the Brahms's G. Major Sonata and Henri Vieuxtemps's Fifth Concerto flawlessly. Elmar's first violins were made by his father and there must have been magic in them. Those who watched him play with Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic at age sixteen knew they were seeing a virtuoso, and he's been impressing audiences around the country ever since. Music lovers in Elmar's hometown of Binghamton, New York are especially pleased, I'm sure.

5. With 280 participants from 37 nations, the Tchaikovsky contest represents a spirit of cooperation that inspires all the nations of the world. I hope that political and social differences -- whatever they may be -- never get in the way of this kind of rich cultural exchange.

6. Here at home we have our own great cultural heritage and today I am delighted to welcome the board members of the Institute of Museum Services, a new federal agency that provides support for our Nation's wonderful museums. I'm pleased to see representatives of so many different kinds of museums here: art, science, and history museums, botanical gardens, planetaria and aquaria. And you come from all over the country.

7. Our nation has among the finest museums in the world and with the help of the Institute we will make them better still. We must keep our firm commitment to the well-being and improvement of museums. They continue to enrich the lives of all Americans. I welcome you to this museum and hope you enjoy the fine examples of American art and furniture in the White House.

(Note: Douglas C. Dillion, President of the Metropolitan Museum of Art and President Kennedy's Secretary of the Treasury is on the Institute Board.)
